Message from the chiefs

Let us first of all take this opportunity to wish all our readers a very joyous, peaceful and wealthy 2016.

This is the very first issue that our team has ever made and it is sad to say that this will be the last. We sincerely hope that each article would affect change to all the readers. We also wish to receive feedbacks through our contact information from our dedicated readers.

Readers will see that the main purpose of this work is to entertain and give information but the way we imagine the result is quite different. We aim to influence every reader with the use of our very own experiences written with colors and incredible facts. Furthermore, we will appreciate it if the readers will understand the realities that happen outside in our society, reflect from what they read, and hopefully share them to other people.

Most of the works refer to the immersion activity that the batch had experienced. Those are the main foundation and reasons why this magazine was realized. We also added some works that might engage the readers and eventually enjoy them.

We would like to express our considerable appreciation to all the authors and writers of the articles in this magazine. It is their generous contributions of time and effort that made this possible.

About the Mag

"SULYAP MAGAZINE" has been decided as the title of DA12's official magazine. The one-word label is a reflection of what Casuray had instilled on the students of the block. Because of the joy and the positive vibes that the barangay had given, the block would like to experience more and would want to have a last glance of the place and the memories; and this magazine is the medicine for the longing and unresolved emotional deficiency that the students feel. Not only would it be a resolution but also an artwork that can be shared to and read by anyone. Furthermore, the articles enveloped inside are dedicated for all to serve as inspirations and entertainment.

The photograph above shows an adorable child smiling brought by his satisfaction in watching the program, receiving gifts and being accommodated by the DA12 pupils. Aside from that, it is also a situation in where he just finished taking a break from playing with his friends. Luckily, DA12's very own photographer Leigh Delima had a chance to capture this moment.

DA12 would like to express their deepest gratitude to the following who helped and guided them in accomplishing the immersion activity:

Barangay Captain Mr. Tomas A. Cirico for supporting us and for allowing us to perform the activity;

The citizens of barangay Casuray for their warm welcoming and consideration;

The students of AC14 and DA11 for creating a unified team, for cooperating and for pushing us to do better;

Ma'am Leciel Ramos for exerting her maximum effort and giving all possible work she can endure;

Ateneo de Naga University and Center for Community Development for organizing and funding the activity;

Our friends and family for extending their extreme efforts and support;

The other immersion activity staff who safely led us safely to our destination.

Course Info

The ICFP002 deals with the realities of students life, but will give more focus on deepening of the understanding of the self in relation to the society. It will allow the students to experience the reality of poverty through immersion and other outreach activities in rural communities as assigned,

at the same time

challenging them for more social involvement. It is also designed to equip the students with the necessary orientation and comprehension of social issues/concerns and provide opportunities for developing and enhancing skills for university life and for community integration and involvement.

DA12

DA12, as from what we know, most likely we would say "Oh they're artists, ones who like to draw." But actually DA12 is not just a group of people who animate, draw or anything related to it. DA12 is a block that does not believe in forever, but rather lifetime. We are friends and we are a big group of dorks, who love plat games and throw corny jokes. We all believe in unity and trust. What makes us complete is that because we are ONE. We have each other as a block and as friends.

Chatters around the room, deciding what to cook and what to buy—A lot of things happened but we came up with an idea at the end. January 22, 2016—The start of the main event and the biggest challenge for all of us, the food committee. Most of us are quite amateurs when it comes to cooking. We had no knowledge of it. Therefore, it was definitely challenging.

Bangs and clangs surrounded the place. Each member did their job. They chopped, sautéed, mixed, and fried. Others prepared the sandwiches, cups, plates and utensils. As the other committees helped distributing the food. We had a rough time but we had fun anyway.

On the second day, January 23, 2016, the same process happened but our main cooks, Zet and Kuya Noli, made the food taste even better. People enjoyed the food and some even came back asking for more. As the day ended, everyone ran towards the leftover food placed in a tiny bluish green saucer. The sweats from our faces glittered yet smiles were plastered.

Food committee accomplished their mission.

With the god of luck on our side, our group fated upon the tasks of the documentation committee. Tasks such as making the ID's, magazine, video, and documenting the whole immersion were surely fun and challenging especially to creative and capable people like us. We took up the challenge and dealt with it enthusiastically. However, things were more difficult than we expected.

Communication with the other classes was hard at first as we were all reluctant to share our ideas. Eventually, we were able to reach out to each other even though there was still a bit of miscommunication along the way. Problems arose regarding the ID's for there were missing names so we had to rush in making them. What's worse was we found out the problem the day before the immersion. Fortunately, things ended well that day. People could sat that our committee had the easiest job during the immersion because we only had to document the whole thing. It was, but we also encountered problems just like any other committee. We also endured the heat with everybody and we obviously did our best in our task. We managed to capture epic, funny, and memorable photos of everyone and everthing during the event. All that's left was to make the magazine and video featuring the whole thing.

Making the magazine and video wasn't easy especially if there's procrastination present. We started planning but we hadn't really made progress for days until there was a few weeks left before the end of February. We started actually doing something and everyone seemed to cooperate. Although a little slow with the progress and already past the set deadline, It is guaranteed that the quality would be top notch because it wasn't a coincidence for us to receive this task rather it was destiny and we only have to prove it.

LOGISTICS

We can never solve a puzzle with a missing piece. Every single piece has its own purpose and each of it requires another for us to solve the hidden image. This maybe compared to our immersion activity in Casuray, Magarao and San Roque, Canaman. One of the those important pieces was the Logistics Committee which showed an ingenious solution to every problem they have faced.

Our effort and dedication as the Logistics Committee were clearly transparent since we were able to perform the assigned tasks before and during the Immersion Activity. With the help of our members, we packed clothing gifts to be distributed, toothbrushes, foods, and other things. We also organized and labeled all boxes to avoid confusion during the distribution of gifts and gathering of equipment. Every tool was carefully counted and the gifts were packed neatly. The transportation of boxes had no problem because of the caution that we incorporated to each of us in handling it.

There were instances that we needed to adjust to because of some unexpected things that happened during our Immersion activity. The setup before the gift giving was delayed because the Food Committee suggested using their boxes as a table for the preparation for the food distribution. Fortunately, our team was so flexible and we didn't hesitate to offer help to those committees which needed assistance.

Our Immersion Activity was successfully ended because of the effort that each of us exerted. We sacrificed our time, money and effort to make our Immersion wonderful and some experienced irregularities that awaken them to the real world. It is fantastic because we managed to reach our goal as individuals and as a team. Nothing seems impossible with the cooperation of everyone.

Committees

Our committee, the Secretariat committee proved to be a vital asset to the entire batch during the immersion. We were the ones tasked with cataloging, indexing, and recording all the supplies which would be used or given away. Our earliest activities included heavy brainstorming about what could be done to improve the situation of the small village. Some of the earliest ideas were providing healthcare freely, planting a medicinal garden, and even dressing one of the fat members up as Santa Claus and give away stuffed animals. Eventually, the free healthcare plan and Operation Santa Claus had to be crossed out due to lack of funding. The majority agreed with the Medical Garden idea and was even showcased in the block debriefing. Preparations were being made to purchase gardening tools and herbal medicines (Cannabis excluded) were already being made until we received a devastating news that the village didn't have enough land for a small garden. Luckily, our group was very quick to adapt to the change of plans and instantly reverted back to the drawing board. Given our financial situation, we couldn't think much of anything we could do to a distant rural community in the middle of nowhere. It slowly dawned to us that the most inexpensive yet long lasting deed we could give to the community would be to paint the town church. Everybody in the committee approved of this proposal and thus began the long hours of journeying through Naga in search of the cheapest quality paint as well as the brushing materials. It was mentioned beforehand that the primary task of the Secretariats is to manage the paperworks of the entire ordeal. That includes lots of receipts, gathering contact information from each and planning

The preparation for the Immersion Activity was intricate and required full attention. We started off by hoarding five pesos per student every meeting during MWF (Monday, Wednesday and Thursday). The purpose of this system is to finance our upcoming activity so that the collection of money won't be difficult. Aside from that, we held our IGP (Income Generating Project). This system also supports our funding but in a different way. Here we exhibit photos that show realities taken by students of all blocks. We gain money by encouraging people to donate one peso equivalent to a vote for a photo they liked the most.

During the first week of November we were oriented about what will happen before and while we are in the said activity with AC14 and DA11. At that time everyone was oblivious of the things we have to do, object we have to bring. However, with the help of ma'am Moon, we quickly registered the requirements in our mind. All blocks started planning thoroughly on January 6. The students of each block contributed ideas into the concept that all must perform. And for some, meetings were held and budgeting was made.

We had our first dry run in the second week of January. The hosts executed and practiced while we watched them and sang the pieces in the immersion playlist. Then, the blocks presented their intermissions. Though all performances had flaws and some students were not cooperating, it was a good dry run. The second and last dry run was held at the fourth week of January. It was almost the same. The only difference was it was slightly better and was calmer and quieter. Then on the next day we had our relaxation to prepare us for the upcoming immersion activity.

Finally, we had our team building in January 8, 2016 with AC14 and DA11. Teams were created and every team is composed of mutual committees coming from all the blocks. The event was pretty complex. There were sets of rules with rewards and punishments and series of challenges that every team must conquer for them to accelerate to the succeeding mission.

The rules focus on unity and coherence. Every team must keep in mind the concept of "Ohana" a hawaiian term translated as family which also refers to the favorite word used by the lead characters in the 2002 movie Lilo & Stitch that continues with "...means family and family means nobody gets left behind." Another rule is the Bathala system. The volunteers are treated as Bathalas or Gods in English. They guide every team to every challenge and once it is completed, a Bathala wishes an offering and the members must compensate with the God's demands. The last one pertains to symbolic objects--two plastic cups filled with water. These cups must not be put down, packed and must be protected from obstacles. Additionally, if a group does not behave properly and are disobedient to their Bathalas, the certain guides have the right to reduce the volume of the cup.

The challenges in the event were called stations. In these stations, teams are required to do whatever the papers say. These papers usually give out instructions and processes that must be obeyed and sometimes, they give hint for the next station to visit. It's almost similar to the hit tv game show Amazing Race! The first station was inside CC211. A yarn is handed over to the group and the group must find a way to insert the strings into each other's clothes until a loop is created. It seemed easy but the other difficulty is that everyone must recite the Prayer for Generosity which by the way is not very familiar to almost all the students, until the creation of a loop is done. After that was the search for a paper where a riddle is written and must be solved. The answer was Pieta and it was the next station. There, another paper with clues inscribed in it should be found. The clues refer to another to another station. The station was back at room CC211. With limited resources—tape and pencil—the team must create a newspaper tower that can stand alone for twenty seconds. If this is achieved, the group will move on to the Ignatian Park for the next challenge. Luckily, all the participants were creative and were able to complete the mission. The fourth station might have been the most difficult. The challenge was the members must fall in line with shoulders side-by-side and be in a squatting manner while their arms are under their legs holding the hands of those who are beside them. The line must move and progress until each member has passed the finish line. What made it extremely hard was in the line, a person must hold the water-filled cup and be able to not reduce the volume of the cup. The completion may be hard but it was fun and enjoyable and the good side is it was everyone's first time to have squiggly feet. Then, all must move on to the faculty to look for hints for the next destination. Everyone successfully found their team's paper and went to Xavier Hall, the next station. The mission was every individual should open their legs to the highest extent while standing in line. The person at the back will enter the leg portal and stack up in front after. It was one of those most awkward scenarios considering the opposite sexes. After that the sun went down and the second to the last mission was realized. It was by far the most disgusting mission of all. The group must create a circle, put out their toothbrushes and brush their teeth until their mouth bubble without the accompaniment of water. Everyone was disgusted by the idea and eventually laughed at themselves. While blindfolded, all participants must go back to the initial station and accomplish the last mission. The last challenge was a puzzle--an image divided into jigsaw puzzle pieces. The trick was every team will be one piece short and the only way to compensate is to collaborate with the other teams. All leaders agreed and built the puzzle with the members. After solving, the image became clear. It was a quotation that relates to teamwork. Everyone read it and discussed what they learned. Then, ma'am Moon Lee screamed "Immersion Batch One!?" "MAGIS!" everyone in the room replied three claps after.

IMMERSION PROPER

FIRST DAY

Following the schedule, we all met up at the 8 pillars early that morning. We then proceeded in preparing for the trip such as checking the attendance and the boxes, taking group photos, final reminders, and the opening prayer. After these, we started loading the jeepneys with our things. It didn't take us long to get to our destination. We were even earlier than what was expected. We, together with DA11, went to the barangay hall in Casuray to meet the barangay captain and officers. They welcomed us with open arms and led us to our respective host families.

We all prepared lunch for our host families and slowly became closer to them. After this, we all headed to the barangay hall in San Roque to start preparations for the program. The program committee did a wonderful job in making the audience participate and have fun. The flow of the program went smoothly and the audience was very entertained with the presentations of each block. The food committee was busy cooking Bihon, making sandwiches, and preparing juice for the people of San Roque. Their hardwork paid off as people found the food they made delicious and satisfying. The logistics committee was busy giving out stubs for everyone so as to make sure they will all be given food and gifts.

While all these was happening, the secretariat committee was too occupies with the community project which is the restoration of the church. Because of their dedication to their duties, they were able to finish it. Of course, all the smiles, hardships, and epic moments were captured by the docu committee through their cameras.

After the program, we started resting and cleaning up so that we could proceed with our harana. Divided into 3 groups, we walked to the homes of the families we sung to. Some of them cried because of the mixed feeling they got when we sung to them and gave them gifts. Their happiness and gratitude was evident on their faces and we all felt the same way. After the harana, some went home to bond with their families and some stayed with their friends to play before the

Everyone went home to their hosts families in order to cook dinner for them. That evening was a good time to bond with their families and Ma'am Moon Lee visited each host family to see if everything was alright. After that, everyone went to sleep in order to face the next day with a great amount of energy.

IMMERSION PROPER

SECOND DAY

It was a cold morning and we all got up to enjoy it with our families. We all prepared breakfast and lunch for them. We told stories, played games and bonded together. Afterwards, we all headed to the barangay hall in Casuray so that we could begin preparations for the program.

Just like in the first day, the members of each committee did their respective tasks. Problems arose such as misunderstandings and miscommunication between them but everything was worked out in the end. There was also a bigger number of audience especially because it was a Saturday, time when children don't go to school. They were difficult to handle during program especially during gift giving. There was also a shortage in utensils which was resolved eventually. Overcoming these proved that each and every one of us was giving our utmost effort to each task.

After the program, we rested and cleaned up to prepare for the harana. It was a long walk to the different families' homes but it was all worth it because we were all happy to give them joy. Songs were heard, tears were shed and gifts were received that afternoon. We finished when it was already getting darker so some who lives faraway went home immediately while others stayed to play.

We were all home just before curfew and started preparations for dinner. With our stomachs full of delicious food, we talked and played with our families and friends. Afterwards, we all went to sleep early so that we could all wake up early to attend the mass the next day.

IMMERSION PROPER

THIRD DAY

All students and volunteers woke up early to prepare for the mass. Some even brought a family member or two. The church was remote. Fortunately, it was a breezy morning filled with soothing wind and animal sounds. A view from above will probably show blue colored objects moving for all those attending the mass except for the companions are required to wear a blue-colored shirt. The church was quite big and was obviously under reconstruction. The mass had started and everyone seemed to be drowsy, some were closing their eyes, some were in a daze and some were distracted by the ceiling design. Almost all pupils appeared to behave and not cause any noise, a really unusual scenario by the way. After the mass, everyone headed home and continued bonding with their families.

As time passed by, the anticipation and the sadness filled us all. It was the last day and a farewell must be said. But,

Captain's eyes the joy which he hides under his perfectly formed mustache. Then, we spontaneously sang the immersion playlist. Everyone sang with great happiness and energy and no one hesitated on devoting their hearts and lungs. When it was all done, we surprised ma'am with the letter that we made. She was touched and was smiling to an extent on it to the man and missus of the house. Additionally, we also had to offer them a small token to show our appreciation of their hospitality. Afterwards, we went to the Pavilion of Casuray and assembled.

While waiting, we secretly fixed the large letter for ma'am which the president of DA12 had planned for so long. We were kind of nervous because that we can see his lips reaching her eyebrows. She was so happy that she invited all of us for a group hug. Almost everyone took selfies and took a video of themselves before leaving. Subsequently, we all entered the jeepneys and relaxed while the wind blows and we were sitting. The jeepneys were overflowing with funny stories and experiences that only the immersion brought.

to divert us from our blues, we were to serve a special food to symbolize our deepest gratitude to the family. There were various cuisines. There were roasted meat, fried meat and even creamed meat. After cooking everyone ate and had little talks with their family. Then, we cleaned our mess, organized our stuffs and packed our bags. However, it was not the end. We still had to give a certificate with our buddy picture any minute a volunteer might catch us, or worse ma'am Moon. We did our best in pretending to be ninjas and successfully finished the work. When everyone was present, we were given a sign to say goodbye to Casuray and all the folks living in it. The Captain gave a short message and ma'am also did. The speeches were sweet and touching; we can see in the

Before the immersion,
It seems to be a mission.
A mission to figure out the societal problems.
So that in the future, can straighten the system.

Life has never been this comfortable and easy,
Since the immersion that drove us crazy.
We may experience difficulties at school,
But to complain, aren't we just like fools?

During our batch immersion we learned that we won't always live comfortably like we are used to, so we should all learn to adjust for we will never know the difficult situations that we may encounter in our life

-gerard and zet-

immersion is a great opportunity for us to express ourselves as we learn to experience many realities in life. it made me realize the importance of loving one's family. it also thought me that in many simple ways we can achieve happiness and good goals in our life.

Some people may not understand
The things that a person can withstand
Not for himself and not for his survival
But for the others to not feel direful

Though he's in pain and out of energy
He can always get out of the misery
Because while the people he loves are in mind
His fears and weaknesses can be set aside

Works here and duties over there
Problems and responsibilities are everywhere
Good thing he never gives up
And he always tends to keep it all up

Not those who always see the negative side
For they find strength and optimism
At the times they encounter cataclysm

The place where we stayed was wonderful, the same as the people who lived there. They taught me how to have a better relationship with my family. The three day immersion we had was the total package. It may be hard but all of our hardworks were worth it.

the immersion felt fulfilling in a way that all the preparations we have done had become successful, and that we were able to take into our hearts the experience of living simply and peacefully, away from the influences of modernization.

processing

After the immersion, we kind of had a small hangover. We still talked about the movement. We shared stories and experiences with everyone and for us to hear and give short tales, we had the what ma'am called "Processing". The Processing had a lot of twists and game list in it. First was the Paint Me Picture. Here, ma'am Moon will give out descriptive sentences or events that we must all create a human image of within the committee and we had to explain it. All committees exerted extreme efforts especially the secretariat committee. Even Johann and Biboi carried the table for about ten minutes just to show a message. Unbelievable! The bad thing about it was ma'am interviewed them last. The next activity was about writing one word on the board that every person can relate to what they encountered. All terms were funny and puzzling and with the addition of the explanation, they all became lively. The activity was kind of tedious because all we can hear were words after words. One notable word was from Zet. He wrote "mommy", the name of the mother of the family he and Gerard lived in with. It was entertaining because all throughout the immersion, Zet couldn't shut his mouth ranting about how mommy made their immersion annoying and full of sermons.

However, he admitted that he really misses her until now. Another activity was the sharing of host family profile. Each buddy will get a 8.5x13 inches paper and will write the name of the host family, describe them, make a symbol out of the description and inscribe a lesson. It was quite enjoyable since what we first did was bond with our buddy and relive the life we had with our pretend family. The first part consumed all the time in the session so the second half was underway on the next class. We created a circle and sat next to our buddy. We all had to give a short discourse relating to our work. To start it off, ma'am rotated a bottle and whoever was pointed by the cap of bottle must talk along with his or her buddy. The beginning pair was Gerard and Zet.

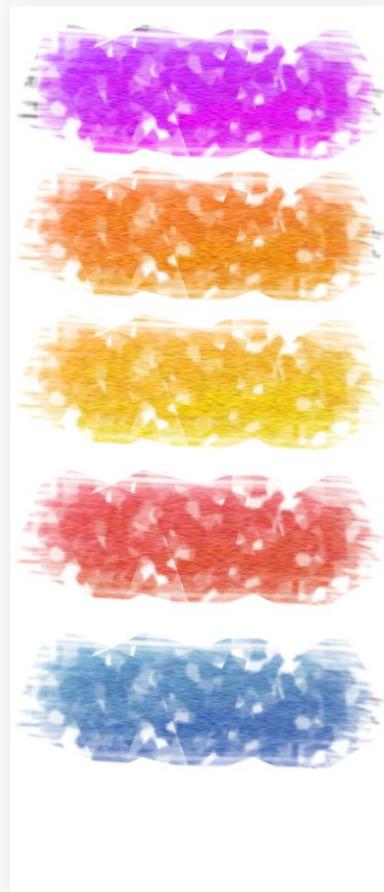

Then, others followed. When we were done, ma'am announced again an activity where we have to write the phrases "Idol", "Thank you", "Sorry" in separate papers. It took long before ma'am collected our work and let us project the next task, Straight From The Heart. The process was the inscription of the name of the person whom we have to give the card to and a short message answering the question "Why?". Then, one by one, we stood up and gave the cards to our classmates, our teacher, other committees, co-committees and even our block and other class. Ma'am crossed out all activities in the list and proceeded to our lesson.
